Example of Bribery and Facilitation of Payment

Offering a Bribe

You offer a potential client tickets to a major sporting event, but only if they agree to do business with your company. This would be an offence as you are making the offer to gain a commercial and contractual advantage. Business may also be found to have committed an offence because the offer has been made to obtain business for the institution. It may also be an offence for the potential client to accept your offer.

Receiving a Bribe

A supplier gives your nephew a job, but makes it clear that in return they expect you to use your influence in the Bank to ensure to continue doing business with them. It is an offence for a supplier to make such an offer. It would be an offence for you to accept the offer as you would be doing so to gain a personal advantage.

ANTI-BRIBERY AND ANTI-CORRUPTION POLICY

Bribing an Official

You arrange for the business to pay an additional payment to an official to speed up an administrative process, such as a request for a visa or work permit. Because this offer is made to gain a business advantage for the Bank, the offence of bribing a public official as well as all individual has been committed as soon as the offer is made.

Giving or Accepting of an Advantage

1. In bribery, the undue advantage is connected to a specific act or omission. The relationship is one of exchange.
2. Giving or accepting of an advantage refers to unlawful favours, which, for public officials, are not connected to a specific official act but rather are granted or received with a general view to the future execution of official duties.
3. The requirement that the act be penalized also in the foreign State where the offence took will likely be met in most cases of corruption.
4. Offer or receipt of cash in the form of a kickback, loan, fee or reward.
5. Giving of aid, donations or voting designed to exert improper influence.

Active & Passive Bribery

1. A person ("A") is associated with "C" (a Company / Bank) if (disregarding any bribe under consideration) A is a person who performs services for or on behalf of C.
2. The capacity in which A performs services for or on behalf of C does not matter.
3. Accordingly, A may (for example) be C's employee, agent or subsidiary.
4. Whether or not A is a person who performs services for or on behalf of C is to be determined by reference to all the relevant circumstances and not merely by reference to the nature of the relationship between A and C.
5. But if A is an employee of C, it is to be presumed unless the contrary is shown that A is a person who performs services for or on behalf of C

Kickbacks: Kickbacks arise when suppliers or service providers pay part of their fees to the individuals who give them the contract or some other business advantage.

Facilitation Payments: Facilitation payments are small bribes to Bank officials with a view to speeding up routine banking facilities to which the entity is already entitled. It may also be that facilitation payments paid by bank staff to speed up other routine processes external to the bank.
